1 Defendant and Counterclaimant ICM Registry, LLC (“ICM”) responds as 2 follows to the Motion brought by Plaintiffs and Counterdefendants Manwin 3 Licensing International, S.A.R.L. (“Manwin”) and Digital Playground, Inc.
4 (“Digital Playground”) (collectively, “Counterdefendants”) to strike ICM’s state 5 law counterclaims.

6 I. INTRODUCTION

7 Of the 115 paragraphs of factual allegations in ICM’s First Amended 8 Counterclaims (“FACC”), Counterdefendants improperly seize upon a single clause 9 in a prefatory statement in an attempt to cloak their wrongful conduct with the 10 protections of California’s anti-SLAPP statute.

11 In fact, the well-pled allegations of ICM’s state law counterclaims for unfair 12 competition under California Business & Professions Code § 17200 et seq. and for 13 intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, are not based on any 14 constitutionally protected conduct of the Counterdefendants. Rather, as is apparent 15 from the allegations of the Counterclaims, ICM’s state law unfair competition and 16 tortious interference claims are based on unprotected and unlawful activity by the 17 Counterdefendants, including antitrust violations arising from illegal tying 18 agreements, group boycotts and other anticompetitive conduct, as well as libel and 19 interference with ICM’s contracts and prospective advantage.

20 Additionally, even if ICM’s state law counterclaims were based on protected 21 activity, ICM has properly shown that its state law counterclaims are legally 22 sufficient and substantiated, for the reasons specified in ICM’s concurrently filed 23 opposition to Counterdefendants’ motion to dismiss (which opposition is 24 incorporated herein), and by the facts alleged in the pleadings and in the evidence 25 in support of the instant opposition and on file in this action.

26 Accordingly, Counterdefendants’ motion should be denied, and ICM should 27 be awarded its attorney’s fees in opposing this motion.

28 ///

1 II. RELEVANT BACKGROUND

2 ICM alleges two counterclaims arising out of state law: unfair competition 3 under California Business & Professions Code § 17200 et seq.; and tortious inter-4 ference with prospective economic advantage. FACC, ¶¶ 90-115. The factual 5 predicate for these counterclaims is Counterdefendants’ unprotected activity as 6 follows, as alleged in detail at ¶¶ 55(a)-(h) and 94-100 of the Counterclaims:

- 7 • Engaging in horizontal agreements with third party affiliates in which 8 the parties agree they will not compete for online adult entertainment search traffic 9 in .XXX, and will confine their competitive activities to TLDs other than .XXX.
- 10 • Colluding with third parties to boycott content from shemale.xxx and 11 ladyboy.xxx based upon the affiliation these sites have with .XXX.
- 12 • Engaging in improper “tying” arrangements with webmasters in which 13 Counterdefendants condition the promotion of the webmasters’ websites on 14 Manwin’s dominant tube sites on a boycott of the .XXX TLD.
- 15 • Engaging in harassment and coercion to extort high-value tube site 16 names such as “tube.xxx” for below-market prices;
- 17 • Demanding that ICM allocate to Counterdefendants several thousand 18 domain names at below-market prices and demanding assurances that neither ICM 19 nor IFFOR will introduce any registry policies that limit or prevent tube sites on the 20 .XXX domain registry.
- 21 • Improperly coercing industry groups to block the promotion of .XXX 22 at adult entertainment events and gatherings in an attempt to improperly restrain the 23 trade of ICM.
- 24 • Conditioning contracts with third parties on non-involvement with the 25 .XXX TLD.
- 26 • Interfering with ICM’s existing domain name contracts with third 27 parties, including Really Useful, Ltd. and Reality Kings, and inducing breach of 28

1 those agreements and causing lost contractual opportunities with potential third 2 party registrants.

3 Although the Counterclaims mention Manwin’s public and private denunci-4 ations of the .XXX TLD in the adult entertainment industry, and Manwin’s press 5 release reporting as fact that ICM has committed antitrust violations, those 6 statements are not pled as the factual predicates for ICM’s state law counterclaims.
7 Id. at ¶¶ 38, 45, 90-115.

8 Additionally, Counterdefendants’ demands prior to the filing of this lawsuit 9 were not made in the course of “settlement negotiations,” but rather (and explicitly) 10 in connection with business and contract negotiations for a possible joint venture 11 between Manwin and ICM, including the possibility of Manwin’s development of 12 some of the prime category generic domains in the .XXX TLD. See Ex. 1 to the 13 Declaration of Stuart Lawley (“Lawley Decl.”) submitted herewith. Manwin’s 14 demands were related to the pursuit of a business venture, not its purported antitrust 15 claims against ICM. Id.; see also Lawley Decl., ¶ 2; Lawley Decl. in Support of 16 ICM’s Motion to Dismiss, Docket No. 22, ¶¶ 25, 27-33.

17 Specifically, in September 2011, Manwin’s Managing Partner, Fabian
18 Thylmann, approached ICM, based on Manwin’s interest in doing business with 19 ICM. Lawley Decl., ¶ 2; Lawley Decl. in Support of ICM’s Motion to Dismiss,
20 Docket No. 22, ¶ 25. On September 23, 2011 Stuart Lawley, ICM’s CEO, had two 21 meetings with Thylmann. Id. During the meetings, Thylmann then set forth a list
22 of “non-negotiable” demands to be met by ICM in order for Manwin to consider 23 doing business with ICM. Id. at ¶ 27. Manwin’s representatives subsequently 24 refined its list of demands including (a) ICM’s allocation of several thousand .XXX
25 domain names to Manwin, free of charge, (b) ICM’s commitment to circumvent the 26 policy development process through which the Sponsored Community expressed its 27 values with regard to policies concerning the operation of user-generated content
28 “tube” sites in the .XXX domain, (c) across-the-board discounts on domain

1 registrations, and (d) the allocation of certain “preimum” or high value domain
 2 names, such as “tube.xxx,” to be operated by Manwin through a revenue share
 3 agreement with ICM. Id. at ¶ 29. Although Thylmann mentioned litigation in 4 connection with Manwin’s demands during the business development negotiations
 5 between ICM and Manwin, at no time did he or any other representative of Manwin
 6 make any reference to claims of antitrust violations by ICM in connection with the 7 .XXX TLD. Lawley Decl., ¶ 3. Indeed, these business development negotiations, 8 including Manwin’s demands, were not impliedly or expressly stated by Manwin as 9 settlement discussions. Id. at ¶ 4. In fact, when ICM requested confidentiality
 10 agreements for the business development discussions, Manwin indicated that 11 confidentiality agreements were not needed because nothing being discussed was 12 confidential. Id.; Ex. 1 to Lawley Decl. Notably, throughout these business 13 development negotiations and discussions, ICM anticipated that any joint venture or 14 arrangement reached between ICM and Manwin would be reduced to, and 15 memorialized in, a written contract between the parties. Lawley Decl., ¶ 2.

16 Although Manwin mentioned litigation, Manwin’s demands were related to 17 the pursuit of a business venture, not Manwin’s antitrust claims against ICM. Id. at 18 ¶ 3; see also Lawley Decl. in Support of ICM’s Motion to Dismiss, Doc. 22, ¶¶ 25-
 19 33. Accordingly, Manwin’s pre-suit demands are not protected activity and not 20 immunized by the anti-SLAPP statute.

21 III. LEGAL ARGUMENT

22 A. Standard

23 “[T]he anti-SLAPP statute neither constitutes—nor enables courts to 24 effect—any kind of ‘immunity.’” Jarrow Formulas, Inc. v. LaMarche, 31 Cal.4th 25 728, 738 (2003). When a “complaint is both legally sufficient and supported by a 26 sufficient prima facie showing of facts to sustain a favorable judgment if the 27 evidence submitted by the plaintiff is credited’ it is not subject to being stricken as 28 a SLAPP.” Id. (citing Wilson v. Parker, Covert & Chidester, 28 Cal.4th 811, 821

1 (2002)). The anti-SLAPP statute “does not bar a plaintiff from litigating an action 2 that arises out of the defendant’s free speech or petitioning,” rather, “it subjects to 3 potential dismissal only those actions in which the plaintiff cannot ‘state[] and 4 substantiate[] a legally sufficient claim.’” Jarrow Formulas, supra, 31 Cal.4th at 5 738 (citing Navellier v. Sletten, 29 Cal.4th 82, 93 (2002)) (alterations in original).

6 To apply the anti-SLAPP statute, the court must first determine “whether the 7 [moving party] has made a threshold showing that the challenged cause of action is 8 one arising from protected activity.” Taus v. Loftus, 40 Cal.4th 683, 703 (2007); 9 Equilon Enterprises v. Consumer Cause, Inc., 29 Cal.4th 53, 67 (2002). “In 10 deciding the question of potential merit, the trial court considers the pleadings and 11 evidentiary submissions of both the plaintiff and the defendant []; though the court 12 does not weigh the credibility or comparative probative strength of competing 13 evidence, it should grant the motion if, as a matter of law, the defendant’s evidence 14 supporting the motion defeats the plaintiff’s attempt to establish evidentiary 15 support for the claim.” Jarrow Formulas, supra, 31 Cal.4th at 728n10.

16 Counterdefendants cannot satisfy this test. As outlined below, Counter-17 defendants have failed to establish that the claims at issue arise out of protected 18 activity; and, in any event, ICM has established that its state law counterclaims are 19 legally sufficient and supported by a sufficient prima facie showing of facts based 20 on the pleadings, motions, and evidence on file in this case. Accordingly, those 21 counterclaims are not subject to being stricken under the anti-SLAPP statute.

22 B. ICM’s State Law Counterclaims Do Not Arise Out of Protected Activity

23 The proper inquiry on this Motion looks only to whether the allegations of 24 Counterdefendants’ anticompetitive conduct and interference outlined above (not 25 Counter-defendants’ speech in the form of Manwin’s denunciation of the .XXX
 26 TLD or Manwin’s press release, neither of which forms the basis of ICM’s state law 27 claims—this is a “red herring” raised by Manwin to justify its motion) is protected 28 activity within the meaning of California’s anti-SLAPP statute. The answer to this

1 question is no. As discussed below, the anti-SLAPP statute has no application to 2 Counterdefendants' unlawful activity underlying ICM's state law counterclaims and 3 Counterdefendants' motion should be denied.

4 1. ICM's State Law Counterclaims Are Not Based on Manwin's
5 Speech, Which In Any Event, Is Not Protected Activity

6 ICM's state law counterclaims are not based on Manwin's denunciation of 7 the .XXX TLD or its statements in its press release. Although the Counterclaims 8 mention Manwin's public and private criticisms of the .XXX TLD in the adult 9 entertainment industry (FACC, ¶ 38), and also mention Manwin's press release as 10 wrongly reporting as fact that ICM has committed antitrust violations (Id. at ¶ 45), 11 those statements are not pled as the factual predicates for ICM's state law 12 counterclaims. See id. at ¶¶ 90-115. Rather, the counterclaims explicitly allege 13 that the basis for and underlying facts of these claims are limited to Counter-14 defendants' anticompetitive acts of engaging in tying arrangements, group boycotts, 15 tortious interference with ICM's contracts and economic advantage, and extort-
16 ionate demands flouting ICM and IFFOR's prescribed standards for registrations 17 within the .XXX TLD. Id. These facts and allegations have nothing to do with 18 Manwin's purportedly protected speech denouncing the .XXX TLD or its false 19 press release. Counterdefendants intentionally attempt to mislead this Court by 20 pretending that these criticisms form the basis of ICM's counterclaims; they do not.

21 Further, Manwin's press release is not protected in any event. Although 22 reports of judicial proceedings are generally an exercise of free speech, the privilege 23 applies only to a "fair and true report" in "a judicial proceeding, or anything said in 24 the course thereof." Sipple v. Foundation for Nat. Progress, 71 Cal.App.4th 226, 25 240, 242 (1999); Cal. Civ. Code § 47; Flatley v. Mauro, 39 Cal.4th 299, 323 (2006) 26 (courts look to the litigation privilege under Cal. Civ. Code § 47(b) "as an aid" in 27 determining whether a given communication falls within the ambit of § 425.16).

28 ///

1 The test is whether the report “captures the substance, the ‘gist’ or ‘sting’ of the 2 subject proceedings.” Braun v. Chronicle Publishing Co., 52 Cal.App.4th 1036, 3 1050 (1997). This test measures the publication by its “natural and probable effect 4 on the mind of the average reader.” Id. (internal citations omitted).

5 Here, Manwin’s press release does not merely “report” or opine on the 6 proceedings in this lawsuit, it actually and falsely casts Counterdefendants’ false 7 allegations as conclusive fact. For example, the press release states: “Lawsuit 8 Reveals ICM Intended to Exploit the Defensive Registration Process to Reap Profits 9 and Conspired with ICANN to Monopolize the .XXX Domain TLD”; and, “[T]he 10 amended complaint adds new details about the illegal scheme by ICANN and ICM 11 to eliminate competitive bidding and market restraints in, and to monopolize, the 12 markets for .XXX registry services. These details include, for example, information 13 about how ICANN profited from the scheme, what ICM and ICANN discussed 14 about above-market pricing in the .XXX registry, and ICM’s coercive acts intended 15 to secure ICANN’s agreement to the scheme.” See FACC, ¶ 84 (ICM’s federal 16 Lanham Act Counterclaim). These statements, on their face, are not just reports or 17 opinion statements. They are not couched as allegations but asserted as fact, and as 18 such are not protected by litigation privilege or the First Amendment.

19 2. Counterdefendants’ Boycott is Not Protected Activity Because It
20 Is Not Based On Political Expression

21 Economic boycotts falling within protected activity are those that are 22 politically motivated. Wilcox v. Superior Court, 27 Cal.App.4th 809, 820 (1994).
23 (citing NAACP v. Claiborne Hardware Co., 458 U.S. 886, 894 (1982); State of Mo.
24 v. Nat. Organization for Women, 620 F.2d 1301 (8th Cir. 1980)). “[U]sing a 25 boycott in a non-competitive political arena for the purpose of influencing 26 legislation is” neither illegal nor “proscribed by the Sherman Act.” Id. at 1315.

27 For example, in the NAACP case, 92 people boycotted white businesses in a 28 Southern city as a means of demanding racial equality and integration. 458 U.S. at 1 894. The Supreme Court held that the boycotters were not liable for any damages 2 resulting from their withholding of business because this “boycott [was] a form of 3 speech or conduct that is ordinarily entitled to protection under the First and 4 Fourteenth Amendments. The black citizens named as defendants in this action 5 banded together and collectively expressed their dissatisfaction with a social 6 structure that had denied them rights to equal treatment and respect . . . ‘the 7 practice of persons sharing common views banding together to achieve a common 8 end is deeply embedded in the American political process.’” Id. at 907-908.

9 Similarly, in Nat. Organization for Women, the National Organization of 10 Women (NOW) boycotted conventions in all states, including Missouri, that had 11 not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment (“ERA”). 620 F.2d at 1315. The Eighth 12 Circuit held that such a “boycott in a non-competitive political arena for the 13 purpose of influencing legislation” was protected activity. Id. at 1315, 1321; 14 accord Fashion 21 v. Coalition for Humane Immigrant Rights of Los Angeles, 117 15 Cal. App. 4th 1138, 1150 (2004) (economic boycott of plaintiff’s stores by 16 advocates of workers’ rights). In essence, NOW used its “political power to bring 17 about the ratification of the ERA by the State of Missouri. The tool it chose was a 18 boycott, a device economic by nature.” Nat. Organization for Women, 620 F.2d at 19 1315.

20 That is not this case at all, and frankly Counterdefendants disrespect the First 21 Amendment by trying to equate their selfish economic interests with genuine 22 political activity. Here, Counterdefendants’ boycott of the .XXX TLD is not 23 protected activity because it is not within a “non-competitive political arena” and is 24 not intended to influence legislation. Nat. Organization for Women, 620 F.2d at 25 1315, 1321; NAACP, 458 U.S. at 894; accord Fashion 21, 117 Cal.App.4th at 26 1150. Here, to the contrary, Manwin is simply trying to make money and protect 27 its market dominance, a conclusion bolstered by its extortionate demands. Those 28 demands confirm that Manwin’s boycott is motivated solely by pecuniary interests,

1 particularly because its attempts to partake in ICM’s operation of the TLD were 2 rebuffed. See FACC, ¶ 21; see also Lawley Decl. in Support of ICM’s Motion to 3 Dismiss, Doc. 22, ¶¶ 25-33 (During the business development meetings between 4 ICM and Manwin, “Thylmann then set forth a list of ‘non-negotiable’ demands to 5 be met by ICM in order for Manwin to consider doing business with ICM . . .”
6 Manwin’s representatives subsequently “refined its list of demands including (a) 7 ICM’s allocation of several thousand .XXX domain names to Manwin, free of 8 charge, (b) ICM’s commitment to circumvent the policy development process 9 through which the Sponsored Community expressed its values with regard to 10 policies concerning the operation of user-generated content ‘tube’ sites in the 11 XXX domain, (c) across-the-board discounts on domain registrations, and (d) the 12 allocation of certain ‘preimum’ or high value domain names, such as ‘tube.xxx,’ to 13 be operated by Manwin through a revenue share agreement with ICM”).

14 3. Manwin’s Extortionate Demands Were Part of Business
15 Negotiations and Are Not Protected Activity

16 Neither litigation privilege nor California’s anti-SLAPP statute apply to 17 statements made during negotiations where “the overall tone of the communi-18 cations is one of persuasion and a desire to cooperate to achieve mutual goals.” 19 Haneline Pac. Properties, LLC v. May, 167 Cal.App.4th 311, 319 (2008). This is 20 so even where there is mention of “pursuing remedies,” including litigation, 21 because if negotiations fail because “the same could be said of nearly any high-22 stakes negotiation.” Id. at 320.

23 Here, Manwin’s demands prior to the filing of the instant lawsuit were made 24 in connection with business development negotiations regarding a joint business 25 venture between ICM and Manwin, including the possibility of Manwin’s 26 development of some of the prime category generic domains in the .XXX TLD and 27 revenue sharing arrangement. Lawley Decl., ¶ 2; Ex. 1 to Lawley Decl.; Lawley 28 Decl. in Support of ICM’s Motion to Dismiss, Docket No. 22, ¶¶ 25-33.

1 Specifically, in September 2011, Manwin’s Managing Partner, Fabian
2 Thylmann, approached ICM, based on Manwin’s interest in doing business with 3 ICM. Lawley Decl., ¶ 2; Lawley Decl. in Support of ICM’s Motion to Dismiss,
4 Docket No. 22, ¶ 25. On September 23, 2011 Stuart Lawley, ICM’s CEO, had two 5 meetings with Thylmann. Id. During the meetings, Thylmann then set forth a list
6 of “non-negotiable” demands to be met by ICM in order for Manwin to consider
7 doing business with ICM. Id. at ¶ 27. Manwin’s representatives subsequently 8 refined its list of demands including (a) ICM’s allocation of several thousand .XXX
9 domain names to Manwin, free of charge, (b) ICM’s commitment to circumvent the 10 policy development process through which the Sponsored Community expressed its 11 values with regard to policies concerning the operation of user-generated content
12 “tube” sites in the .XXX domain, (c) across-the-board discounts on domain
13 registrations, and (d) the allocation of certain “preimum” or high value domain
14 names, such as “tube.xxx,” to be operated by Manwin through a revenue share 15 agreement with ICM.” Id. at ¶ 29. Although Thylmann mentioned litigation in 16 connection with Manwin’s demands during the business development negotiations
17 between ICM and Manwin, at no time did he or any other representative of Manwin
18 make any reference to claims of antitrust violations by ICM in connection with the 19 .XXX TLD. Lawley Decl., ¶ 3. Indeed, these business development negotiations, 20 including Manwin’s demands, were not impliedly or expressly stated by Manwin as 21 settlement discussions. Id. at ¶ 4. In fact, when ICM requested confidentiality
22 agreements for the business development discussions, Manwin indicated that 23 confidentiality agreements were not needed because nothing being discussed was 24 confidential. Id.; Ex. 1 to Lawley Decl. Notably, throughout these business
25 development negotiations and discussions, ICM anticipated that any joint venture or 26 arrangement reached between ICM and Manwin would be reduced to, and 27 memorialized in, a written contract between the parties. Lawley Decl., ¶ 2.

28 ///

1 Although Manwin mentioned litigation, Manwin’s demands were related to 2 the pursuit of a business venture, not Manwin’s antitrust claims against ICM. Id. at 3 ¶ 3; see also Lawley Decl. in Support of ICM’s Motion to Dismiss, Doc. 22, ¶¶ 25-
4 33. Accordingly, Manwin’s pre-suit demands are not protected activity and not 5 immunized by the anti-SLAPP statute.

6 Counterdefendants’ reliance on Feldman v. 1100 Park Lane Associates, 160
7 Cal.App.4th 1467, 1480 (2008) is inapposite. In Feldman, the court held that a 8 notice to quit in connection with a subsequent unlawful detainer action was “a 9 communication[] preparatory to or in anticipation of the bringing of an action or 10 other official proceeding” protected by the anti-SLAPP statute. In other words, the 11 pre-suit communication in Feldman had a direct logical nexus to the subsequent 12 lawsuit. See id. Similarly, in Fleming v. Coverstone, Case No. 08cv355WQH, 13 2009 U.S.Dist.LEXIS 22021, at *13-14 (S.D. Cal. Mar. 18, 2009), the pre-suit 14 communications had “some connection or logical relation to the action,” namely, 15 the communication—an email exchange—formed the very basis of the lawsuit, 16 which concerned the enforceability of the email exchange and a return of a deposit 17 based on those emails. Id.

18 That is not this case. Here, as outlined above, Manwin’s pre-suit demands 19 related to business development and contract negotiations for a possible joint 20 venture between Manwin and ICM. Ex. 1 to Lawley Decl; Lawley Decl., ¶¶ 2-4; 21 see also Lawley Decl. in Support of ICM’s Motion to Dismiss, Doc. 22, ¶¶ 25-33.
22 Indeed, at no point did Manwin make any reference to its later-manufactured 23 antitrust claims against ICM. Lawley Decl., ¶ 3. Accordingly, Manwin’s pre-suit 24 demands have no logical nexus to Counter-defendants’ antitrust claims in this action
25 and therefore are not protected statements within the meaning of the anti-SLAPP 26 statute.

IV. CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, Counterdefendants fail to make a prima facie showing that ICM’s state law counterclaims arise out of Counterdefendants’ protected activity. As such, Counterdefendants have failed to shift any burden to ICM to show that ICM’s counterclaims are legally sufficient.

In any event, ICM has properly shown that its state law counterclaims are legally sufficient and substantiated, for the reasons specified in ICM’s concurrently filed opposition to Counterdefendants’ motion to dismiss (which opposition is incorporated herein), and by the facts alleged in the pleadings and in the evidence in support of the instant opposition and on file in this action.

Therefore, ICM respectfully request the Court deny Counterdefendants’ motion to strike in its entirety and award ICM its fees upon the denial of the motion.
