I abstain.

I do not believe that voting on these together is proper, as the two names are affected by different AGB considerations.

In terms of Islam, there is the sensitivity about the name of a population and religious community.

In terms of Halal, this has become a common word used in restaurants and at my local grocery store. I buy halal goat meat and there is no certification stamp on the product. While in some cases it may be a regulated category, that could be dealt with differently.

While I understand that they have been grouped together by the applicant and the GAC, as two different applications I think they should be dealt with separately.
